Course Objectives: As a result of the participation in this activity, participants should be able to:

1. Categorize the requirements that Florida law, the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education, The Joint Commission and sponsoring institutions place upon teaching physicians who supervise residents.
2. Identify and differentiate the CMS and ACGME supervisory levels teaching physicians should employ when supervising resident physicians.
3. Recognize the basic elements of medical malpractice and sovereign immunity, and appreciate the role negligent supervision plays in malpractice actions.
4. Apply techniques to avoid supervision-related claims and provide appropriate resident supervision.
